Not illustrated. 1845 Excerpt: ...so you may have a pleasant and attached companion, one who loves you well, and can relieve the dulness of your journey; I wish Master Jaques Gonsius, my Edward Wotton, elder brother of the celebrated Sir Henry, knighted by Queen Elizabeth, and made Comptroller of her Household in 1592. Created by James I. Baron Wotton of Morley, in Kent. countryman, could give you his company. I know not why you should have desired Wotton to sign his name to the bond which you have left with me. You wrong me if you imagine I trust any one more than yourself. Do not be disturbed if it happens that you cannot do as you wish about the money which you have borrowed of me, and do not suppose my affection for you will be lessened on that ground; I am even now writing to Doctor Glauburg and Wechel to let you have money on my security, if by any chance your supplies for the rest of your journey should fail you; I will write again in three days.--Farewell, my dearest son. Prague, 10th of March, 1575. LANGUET TO SIDNEY. jOU see how long the Emperor is lingering here, for the assembly was opened the very day on which you and I arrived here. No business of any great importance has yet been transacted in it. The Emperor has not yet declared to the Bohemians his intention regarding the confession of faith which they presented to him in the month of May, on the other hand they refuse to consider the question of supplies, and the other matters on which he addressed them, until they have received his answer. At present they have adjourned their deliberations on account of the harvest, and are going to their homes, intending to return hither about the tenth of next month. The Emperor will scarce be able to conclude Andrew Wechel, the celebrated printer. his affairs here before the meeting of...
